

Design choice and changes: From high fidelity to implementation, there was not a large change in the formatting. I chose to do a list version for shopping carts so that this would be the best chance for users to edit their orders since everything is large and individually listed. This would mean that in checkout, there would have the extra charges such as tax. This way, the shopping cart is a simplistic layout where users would not be distracted from other items. After they preview their cart, they would go to checkout.
